ADDENDUM TO INSTRUCTIONS FOR CHILD SUPPORT MOTION

- Beginning October 1, 2008 child support will be based upon the income of each parent as well as the number of overnights each parent is court ordered to have the child(ren).
- The order of parenting time that is currently in effect on your case will be used to determine the number of overnights each parent has the child(ren), absent credible evidence to the contrary.
- If parties do not currently follow their court ordered parenting time schedule then it is up to the parties to change the current order by either filing a motion to modify the existing parenting time order, or by filling out a consent parenting time order. The cost of a parenting time motion is $100.00 (combination motions involving both child support and parenting time can be filed, please see next paragraph)
- When filing a parenting time motion, with the intent of modifying support, a combination Child Support/Parenting Time motion should be used. The filing fee for said motion is $100.00
- When filing a parenting time motion (or combo motion), parents will have to provide information to the Court to indicate how many overnights they each have the child yearly, or what they are requesting for a parenting time schedule.

Note: Child Support IS based upon the number of overnights you have with your child(ren) as well as the income of both parents.

Note: Parenting Time is NOT based upon either your payment history, or the sum you are currently ordered to pay.
